From Ku Klux Klan to

Today — Prejudice Is

a Sorry Sister

Bloc voting is a sad commentary on universal suffrage. Men claim to cherish independence and the right to make up their individual minds about candidates, and then bloc leaders who claim to speak for this group or that group announce that the individuals' minds have already been made up for them.

If this were really true there would be no point in making stump campaign, writing editorials in the papers, addressing letters to the editor, or otherwise following the time-honored practices of American elections.

But bloc voting isn't the threat it's cracked up to be. The mere mention of it is apt to drive independent voters in the opposite direction — because most Americans, while willing to hear an argument, definitely dislike being ordered about . . . especially on Election Day.

You can prove this from the election returns anywhere in America.

What brings this to mind today is an Associated Press dispatch from Little Rock dated June 25 reporting that I. S. McClinton, president of the Arkansas Democratic Voters association, told a Negro rally in Desha county June 25 that the association would support Governor Cherry and Sid McMath in their current campaigns for office.

That announcement is probably about as effective as the one union labor leaders put out in Ohio when they were going to beat the late Senator Bob Taft — only to see Taft win by the greatest majority in the Buckeye state's history. Whether you are a unionist, a religionist, or a racist, your vote at the polls is a personal responsibility that can't be delegated to some private caucus — and as an American you know it.

This editor doesn't have much patience with the business of slanting elections by organized prejudice. One of our first introductions to Arkansas 31 years ago was to report on a two-state meeting of the Ku Klux Klan at Junction City, on the Arkansas-Louisiana line, where a rabble of several thousand listened to interminable harangues and burned some crosses. It was a stupid and evil thing and because of the forthright report in the next morning's El Dorado News your editor was summoned to an upper-floor office of an El Dorado bank building. It turned out to be the headquarters of the kleagle — but nothing came of it.

Nearly everyone belongs to some organization or other — but not on Election Day.

On Election Day we are Americans, voting as individuals for the candidates whom the record seems to show will do the best job for county, state, and nation. To vote otherwise, out of group prejudice, is to dishonor the institution of free elections in this republic.

Your editor was a forthright commentator 31 years ago. I don't speak differently today.

Baptists to Honor Sunday School Worker

A Commencement Service will be held at the First Baptist Church on Wednesday, June 30, at 7:45 p.m. in honor of seventy-five Sunday school workers who have successfully completed an extensive training course sponsored by the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Since the training program began last October, twenty books dealing with every phase of Sunday school work have been taught in morning and evening classes. Over 90% of the teachers and officers have participated in these classes making it possible now for the church to offer a more efficient program of religious education.

During the past nine months a total of 118 awards have been earned which establishes a new record not only for the local church but for other Baptist churches in Arkansas. On May 1, 1954, the First Baptist Church ranked fourteenth in the training awards throughout the entire Southern Baptist Convention which encompasses more than 29,000 churches.

One of the most important results of this training program has been the attainment of the Standard of Excellence, a well-defined program work set up by the Sunday School Board to measure the efficiency of Baptist Sunday Schools. Only nine Baptist Sunday schools in the state of Arkansas have qualified for this special recognition this year.

Other fruits of this program have been the utilization of 50 new workers in definite Christian service and the enlistment of approximately 200 new members in the Sunday school since last October.

The public is invited to attend this special service. Pastor S. A. Whittle will deliver the Commencement address and Earl Education Director will present the diplomas and awards.

Border Cities Bracing for Flood Water

19 Persons Are Drowned, Worst Is Yet to Come

LAREDO, Tex. (UP) — The mighty Rio Grande, fed by floods that have left 19 persons dead or missing, aimed the biggest flood in its history today at the twin cities of Laredo and Nuevo Laredo.

The flood waters were expected to hit the cities with a crest of between 55 and 60 feet today or early tomorrow. The International bridge linking the cities was closed to traffic last night.

Any crest of more than 43 feet would send water tumbling over it. The river was at 31 feet at 6 a.m. (CST) 8 a.m. (EDT) but only 20 miles upstream, at the Dolores ranch, the river had already reached 45 feet.

The state highway patrol and the sheriff's office in Ozona reported eight persons were known to have died in the flood waters, another died of a heart attack and 10 persons were missing at Ozona, Tex., on a tributary of the Rio Grande. Rains at Ozona measured up to 12 inches.

The rains were blamed, at least in part, on "Hurricane ALICE," the first of the 1954 season which sent a mass of moist air rushing west from the Gulf of Mexico when it hit last Friday.

The river normally is about three feet deep between the two Laredos, but ran dry from there down to its mouth at Brownsville, Tex., last summer for the first time since records have been kept.

The present flood was expected to cause little damage after it hits Falcon Dam, 7 miles below Laredo, which was completed last year.

Rivermen estimated it would put 20,000 acre-feet of water in the reservoir.

Seven towns on both sides of the river were partially or wholly under water. At Ozona, 500 families were reported homeless, but authorities said "things are pretty well under hand, if another flash flood doesn't come down at us."

Sheriff Leo Earnest said the flood hit Ozona "so fast we didn't have time to do anything."

The rains, some up to 32 inches were spawned by last week's Hurricane Alice, which lashed the Texas-Mexican Gulf Coast for 12 hours last Friday.

Ahead of the rushing floodwaters lay the great international Falcon Dam, dedicated less than a year ago by the presidents of the United States and Mexico. It was expected to keep the damaging floodwaters from the lush vegetable and citrus-growing lower Rio Grand Valley and its bit population.

For the lower valley, the great flood was a blessing. Beyond Falcon Dam, the river has been virtually dry. Now the flood will be used in future months to slacken the mammoth thiefs of the orange and grapefruit groves, the vegetable farms and cotton-growing areas.

At least half of Ciudad Acuna, across the river from Del Rio, Tex., was under water. Some 15,000 people huddled in the Tamaulipas Hills. Water, medical supplies, food and clothing were being flown in by the American Red Cross. The privately owned International Toll Bridge was swept away between Ciudad Acuna and Del Rio.

Five miles south of Del Rio, between Piedras Negras and Eagle Pass, the rising flood beat the privately owned International Toll Bridge to sweep away between Ciudad Acuna and Del Rio. The public is invited to attend this special service. Pastor S. A. Whittle will deliver the Commencement address and Earl Education Director will present the diplomas and awards.

Harris to Open at Nashville on Saturday

Ed Williamson, campaign manager of Congressman Harris, announces the opening campaign speech at a county-wide rally in Nashville, Howard county, Saturday night, July 3 at 8 p.m.

The local people of Nashville will have charge of arrangements and will provide a special program of local talent and entertainment, featuring a trio from the Louisiana Hay Ride.

The flood waters were expected to hit the cities with a crest of between 55 and 60 feet today or early tomorrow. The International bridge linking the cities was closed to traffic last night.

Ed Williamson

The speech of Congressman Harris will be broadcast over local radio stations throughout the District.

Mr. Williamson, recently named to head the campaign, is a native of Columbia county, graduate of Magnolia High school and Henderson State college at Arkadelphia, where he and Mr. Harris were classmates. Following his graduation, Mr. Williamson taught school and coached football for several years and was elected circuit and chancery clerk of Columbia county. He went into the service of his country in the early part of World War II and served for four years.

Mr. Williamson is engaged in private business, owner and manager of the Ford Chain Factory in Magnolia. He is active in civic affairs, past district governor of Lions International and is presently chairman of the official board of the First Methodist church of Magnolia.

"I am very glad to be associated with my close friend of many years, Congressman Harris, in his campaign for re-election," said Mr. Williamson. "I have closely observed his record in Congress for the past fourteen years, and I think he has made a very good one. With his experience and seniority, I am convinced he is in a much better position to more ably represent this District and Our Nation in the future."

Congressman Harris says he is very happy indeed to have his long time friend, Ed Williamson, to manage his campaign. "This expression of confidence," he said, "from my personal friend, who is so well known throughout the District, is highly gratifying, and I know the campaign will be ably directed."

The initial "kick-off" and the opening program at Nashville will be followed by an active speaking tour of the District by the Congressman. Announcement of his speaking engagements in each of the counties will be made in advance. He will discuss the issues of vast importance to the American people and our future security, his program and record of accomplishments in Congress.

Other fruits of this program have been the utilization of 50 new workers in definite Christian service and the enlistment of approximately 200 new members in the Sunday school since last October.

Reduction in Arms Asked by Ike, Churchill

By MERRIMAN SMITH

WASHINGTON (UP) — President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Sir Winston Churchill today called for a "general and drastic reduction" of world armament designed to apply atomic knowledge to human betterment rather than destruction.

The President and the 70-year-old prime minister issued a philosophical statement of the Anglo-American approach to the problem of halting communism, but avoided specific reference to such international hot spots as Indochina.

Their "agreed declaration" was issued by the White House about an hour after they had concluded a series of talks which began last Friday.

The two leaders said they felt "the cause of world peace would be advanced by general and drastic reduction under effective safeguards of world armaments of all classes and kinds."

"It will be our preserving resolve to promote conditions in which the prodigious nuclear forces now in human hands can be used to enrich and not to destroy mankind."

They urged "the establishment and maintenance of such associations of appropriate nations as will best in their respective regions, preserve the peace and the independence of the peoples living there."

DOROTHY DIX

A Bored Boor

Dear Miss Dix: I've been married eight years, have two children and expect a third in October. My husband says now that I bore him and he goes out every night on his own. I guess I'm not a very interesting personality at that. I've never worked so hard that had much chance to meet people. I don't make friends easily, and even when people are pleasant to me I don't hold their friendship. Since I am alone every evening, I'd like something to do after the children are asleep, is there any school where I can develop my personality, improve my mind, or learn to be a more interesting person? Perhaps I'll never be able to win my husband's attention again, but at least I'd like to have a sense of personal accomplishment.

M. S.

Outside The Pale

Answer: High on my list of people who "never would be missed" is the father who considers his children uninteresting, and is bored with the mother who cares for them all day. This same father almost invariably takes great delight in bragging about his offspring, showing their pictures, accepting congratulations on each new arrival.

But it never occurs to him that he has any obligation to his family except to hand over (very reluctantly) as little money as possible to support his wife and children.

If you think these fathers are rare, take a look around your own social circle. Many fathers grasp any excuse, business, lodges, visits to their own parents — anything to get out of the house and away from the youngsters. If they'd only make an effort to become acquainted with their children and to understand the harassed mother, they would acquire an entirely new idea of family life. Children are most interesting, even fascinating and the father who deprives himself of the joys of their formative years is cheating

both himself and his family.

If you can possibly make your mate see this angle of home life,

Martha, he may get over being so we all got along beautifully, but late it seems that everything my mother does irritates me. I get to the point where I throw things.

TESS R.

Answer: When a person of usual

too much to do to go in for personality courses and the like, but perhaps you could inveigle Dad into taking while you take a "couple of days" by sitting with the Y. W. C. A., or at one of the manifold problems that daily pressures in your city. Better still,

hire a baby sitter one night a week and take hubby along. Then make a determined effort to be pleasant to your neighbor; ask some of them in

for an evening of TV, cards, or best of all, just good conversation. Your home life undoubtedly, does need a bit of spicing, and it's up to you to make the friends.

Answer: The responsibility of a godmother are spiritual, but baby-sitting doesn't come into the picture at all. You're being un-derful upon my dear Ellie, and it's up to you to set the parents straight.

to some other Odd Fellow who also had a son that thought he was a wrestler.

"Who got you into this jam?"

Pa put on an injured look. "Why, Freddie, I just happened to mention to Gus Stumpfig about you doing some wrestling at the Y, to keep in shape for football . . ."

"And you didn't know that Jake Stumpfig was intercollegiate heavy weight champion while he was at Lehigh and is wrestling coach at the Turners, where I wanted to take lessons but didn't, because you wouldn't put up a mere 30 bucks."

Pa looked so worried that I knew what else he had done and took him up on it when he said, "You don't think you can throw him, Freddie!"

"How much are you betting?" I asked bluntly.

"More than I can afford, son.
It was out of my pride in you,"
he tried to excuse himself.

"Old Man Stumpfig got you a little oiled and then put the bee
on you."

"Freddie, the stakes are already up and I forfeit that $50 if you renege on me."

I shot back, "You match me
with what is just about the best collegiate wrestler in these parts, and when I question the deal I'm a quitter—is that what you're trying to say?"

"Now, Freddie . . ."

"If you make it 'Fred' it would be a chance, by a fluke."

"I can take Jake Stumpfig like Grant took Gettysburg, if you didn't make any deal at to what rules
we wrestle by."

Pa was flabbergasted. "Why
the rules of good sportsmanship,
of course!"

I explained. "In wrestling, Pa,
there are two kind of rules. There are intercollegiate rules and there are professional rules. My chances are twice as good under professional rules."

"What's the difference?"

"Plenty. It's too long to explain.
What will help me is time. I'll freeze to the mat and let Jake work until he's tired out or leaves himself open some way. That would count against me, intercollegiate."

Jake must weigh 15 pounds more than me and he's plenty fast for a fellow his size. Insist on professional rules and I don't think he will make much fuss, thinking he can take me either way. Make it to a fall, too. I don't want any decision business."

"Okay, Fred." Pa said. "I knew I could depend on you."

"Seeing as you made the bet I'll make it a fluke."

NEW YORK — Any girl who fails to ambush a husband during the summer open season on bachelors can soothe her pride by going to Africa and mowing down
an elephant.

without even asking me, perhaps I should know how far you've planned ahead. Where do you expect to hold this bout?" I asked.

"The Odd Fellows lodge room.
We can borrow the Y mat. I've already talked with Will Dunkelberger. When he heard it was for a little bout between you and Jake, he cooperated right away."

"I can imagine," I said. At the same time it made me think of Milo and how downfallen he would look to hear that I would be having a bout without him.

"There won't be any ropes,
then," I said slowly, as though trying to think out the details. "I guess that's all right, if they don't put the chairs too close to the mat.
Are you going to charge admission?"

"Well, we didn't get that far," Pa said. "Gus Stumpfig suggested we put 'on the bout' after one of our regular meetings, when we'd get a good crowd."

"Okay. Broach the idea to him that somebody ought to pass around a hat, anyway. Not you or him, of course. He'll fall for it, especially if the collection goes to the winner."
